

NEW THINGS FOR WOMEN

MARVELOUS DEVELOPMENT OF
READY-TO-WEAR GOWNS.Though the Shops Are Full of Fine
Goods, the Lively Demand Makes
It Unsafe to Procure at Once.

Never before have the designs for dressy gowns been more artistic than they are this season. Never before have the fascinating ideas been carried out so extensively. The large and increasing demand by the American woman for fine materials, artistically and beautifully made, has made it possible not only for the dressmaker, with her exclusive clientele, to furnish the most correct and smartest creations, but also for the manufacturer of high-class suits and gowns to produce all the late conceptions equal to those that come from the Paris shops.

The possibilities which the shops at home present in this line of handsome ready-made garments are bewildering and beautiful. There are gowns, and stunning gowns, too, for the tall, the short, the stout and the slender figures. And the one great advantage of these gowns ready to wear and beautifully designed is that they combine ideas that the average woman never could think of, while at the same time they are of the very latest and smartest styles. There is also an advantage in seeing a gown all made up.

But whatever wardrobe one has, no matter how much richness of material or how much money one has spent on it, one will not look right if the most careful attention is not paid to the important question of line and cut. This is to be a season when all pads or stuffing of any kind is tabooed. The idea will be to have the figure as slim as possible; that is, to the knees, when the flounces and furrows may be as thick and full and fluffy as one please. The skirts are all long; that is, of course, in the dress gowns, as the walking suits and evening costumes all clear the ground. The long skirts are graceful, but one has to learn how to walk all over again. One cannot pick one's feet up but must slide along one foot forward the length of the skirt, which, by the way, is another reason why the drop linings are used. The linings held the skirt out but made it much more difficult to walk.

The cut and line of the bodice should be observed just as carefully as that of the skirt. Dame Fashion decrees that the shoulders should be long and broad. Drop a narrow line from the chin to the farthest end of the long clinging skirt, and behold the simple, slender, graceful figure of 1902! There will be a strong tendency this summer to get away from the masculine effects which have ruled so. The summer girl will be more careful of her complexion when she goes out to play golf, will wear lighter shoes and many, many more frills and flounces than heretofore. She will be less athletic and take more pride in being dainty than in being masculine.

Some new coats appeared in the displays last week, which are astonishingly fetching and beautiful. One of the very smartest is pictured here. The material is a very finely-woven tulle of the natural straw color. The coat is cut after the kimono style, which is so graceful and so very easy to slip on and off. The garish of black velvet and lace around the collar and cuffs and the few deep tucks in the yoke add the striking note to its sweet simplicity. Besides this coat there are many others of varied styles and materials and in prices ranging from very low to very, very high amounts.

"First come first served" is the rule in the shops, and many a woman who counts a gown hers because she has tried it on several times and has almost, not quite, decided to take it, finds that her destiny has robbed her. Just such an instance occurred the other day, and this woman in particular was highly incensed that "her" gown had been sold without her knowing it. And, by the way, that same creation of lace and chiffon went out of town, which was a shame, for it was a beauty.

But there are plenty just as pretty left. The way that ribbons, chiffon, mousseline and lace are employed in these pattern robes is nothing short of wonderful in both artistic designing and effect. The gown pictured here is one of the examples of what elegant materials and artistic designing can do. It is of silk crepon, with pink roses in a Pompadour scattered over its surface. Down the front is a panel of genuine Irish point lace, and the other lace garnishments are of the same exquisite design. The drop overskirt has two skirts beneath it, one of cream tulle, which is covered with a fanned drop of pale green and pink chiffon. The blending of the colors is delightful. The handiwork throughout the gown is perfect, as is that on all these high-classed garments. Striking results have been gained by the close and exact detail work with which these gowns are covered. An example of this careful detail work, which means so much in the gown's appearance, is the black lace gown pictured here. The foundation is of all-over black lace of a delicate pattern—the broad tulle bands are arranged on the lace to form the outline of the bolero on the bodice, and on the yoke and top of the flounce of the skirt. The effect is stunning, as the illustration shows.

Pongee garments, both coats and fancy costumes, are going to find great favor this summer. And they are so pretty. Words cannot express the soft, cool, elegant appearance pongee gowns present. Their creamy tones are beautiful so beautifully with the shimmer of the white satin and the softer tones of chiffon, elie blue, the green of the old Nile, the red of the cherry and the pale, delicate pinks all form most artistic combinations for this favorite fabric.

Among the numerous novelties in flounces one of the most effective is the plaited-shaped flounce. It is machine plaited, the folds becoming narrower as the flounce decreases in depth. The greater depth of the flounce, as is also the width of the plaits, being generally placed at the back of the skirt. One or more of the flounces forms the trimmings, and they are usually of gauze, tulle, mousseline placed on skirts of the same material.

A number of the fancy boas are adorned with flowers in self material. The boas are usually of chiffon or mousseline and sometimes of mullin, although these are more perishable. The favorite boas are of black and white rose petals scattered through the folds of the soft fluffiness. Pink and white combinations are pretty, and lavender will do for some costumes. A very recent idea is to introduce Easter lilies instead of the roses. The lilies are made with green and yellow hearts to simulate closely the genuine flowers. This is a little change from the rose effect and is really quite pretty and striking.

SUIT AGAINST GAS COMPANY.

Ora Arthur Makes a Demand on Company for Service.

An application was filed in the Superior Court yesterday for a writ of mandate to compel the Consumers' Gas Trust Company to furnish gas to Ora Arthur at 550 Ashland avenue. The petition is filed on relation of the State. It sets out that Arthur has his house fitted for gas, but that the company refuse to turn it on when he made application. A suit said to be identical was carried to the Supreme Court and the decision was against the company. Judge McMaster signed the writ.

New Albany's Water Works.

A recent lease of the property of the New Albany Water Company to the Indiana Water Company resulted in an order being issued yesterday by Judge John H. Baker, of the United States Court, enjoining the Indiana Water Company from taking possession of the property. The application for a restraining order was made by the Louisville National Banking Company, one of the minority stockholders of the New Albany Water Company. The defendants are the two water companies, the city of New Albany, A. M. Bacon, F. E. Sherman, A. C. Hunt, R. A. Brown and F. L. Harris. Messrs. Bacon, Sherman, Hunt and Harris are Chicago capitalists who recently purchased a majority of the stock of the New Albany Water Company. They organized the Indiana Water Company and leased the plant of the other company to the Indiana Company at an annual rental of $1500. The lease was made over the protest of the minority stockholders of the New Albany company. The application for an injunction will be heard by Judge Baker on April 25.

Big Four Secures Injunction.

Judge Carter yesterday issued a temporary restraining order to prevent the Indianapolis, Shelbyville & Southeastern Traction Company from crossing the Big Four Railroad at the intersection of Walnut and Washington streets, Fairmont, Ind. The railroad company has kept a switch for several weeks to keep the track clear and to prevent the traction company from crossing it. The engine will not be removed. The suit is to test the right of County Commissioners to grant rights of way over public roads without assessing damages to adjacent property owners who have titles in fee simple. The hearing was set for April 14.

More Time for Davis.

Richard C. Davis, former cashier of the People's National Bank, at Washington, will not receive his sentence for embezzlement next Tuesday, Judge John H. Baker, of the Federal Court, yesterday granted him an extension of time so that he might take part in the prosecution of his suits against Washington gamblers to whom he lost money. Some of these suits have been won by Davis and others are pending in court.

COLORED MEN'S STATEMENT.

Say Meeting Was Not Correctly Reported by a Morning Paper.

In connection with the meeting of colored citizens held at Jones's Tabernacle Friday night to adopt resolutions indorsing the Crumpacker bill on the question of the representation of Southern States in Congress the following statement was made yesterday:

"There appeared in the Sentinel of this morning an account of a mass meeting of colored citizens held Friday evening, which is so inaccurate and misleading that the undersigned feel it our duty to place the facts before the public.

"The first place, it was plainly and emphatically stated that the meeting was non-political, but had been called for the purpose of indorsing the course of Congressman Crumpacker in his efforts to have the Constitution of the United States enforced. A series of resolutions was submitted and adopted. Remarks were made by several persons present, but no reference was made, either directly or indirectly, to the city administration nor to Mayor Bookwalter.
